

Unfortunately people take what is said on TV seriously. We live in a time where one company owns many stations such as Sinclair. Their decision to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election on many local stations is a scary example of the effects of media consolidation.

They use the public airwaves free of charge. Aren't they obligated to serve public interest? We need, now more than ever, the airways to be open to all opinions and excellent journalism. This anti-Kerry documentary is not about real issues that matter in our world now. We need strong rules regarding media ownership. We need to not to renew Sinclair's license because they are using their freedom in exploitive ways.

Sincerely,
Rev. Julia Jarvis
